

Corinthian Jedi The Movie Premiere Night

The day had finally arrived Saturday 9th December 2006- the 1st world premiere of Corinthian Jedi the movie. This great event was held at the palace of Darth Moore with a host of VIPs invited to this great spectacle.

The guest where greeted by a red carpet leading from the street into the event. The word on the street brought lots of VIPs including the dark sith lord himself Darth Vader, also spotted was minor celebratory Carl Moore (he of the Blind Date Christmas special fame). The only black mark on the night was that of certain missing Corinthian Jedi Cricketers – Giles Greedo, Mongo Jase, iLobot Jackson, Kelly Kelly, iVor Nano, Caribbean Roy, & Metals & Materials Watson. The Quartermaster was concerned so a quick call was made to everyone's favourite investigator MagnumPI to find the lost Jedi. Everyone adjourned in the front room for canapés & aperitifs. The movie was all set to start when Fingers received a phone call from MagnumPI explaining 2 Jedi cricketers were on route. The two late Jedi where none other than M&M Watson & Caribbean Roy 1½ hours late, please guys being fashionably late is so 90's!

The Toastmaster for the evening Darth Moore then announced that the movie was ready to start, the lucky guests seem to appreciate the 1st ever Jedi movie with a standing ovation for the Director & stars.

'Unbelievable, A true masterpiece' -Tony Drant

'I thought the movie was great' –Wookie Moore

'Good job it was filmed in wide screen to fit Carl's ego' –Uncle Daz

The Movie Premiere was Followed by a special award For the web poll- Who Let The Jedi Down In 2006

THE CORINTHIAN

Admiral Tazbar was presented with his 'Mofo T Shirt' by the 2006 Webmaster Fingers Watson to the cheers from his fellow Jedi. The goodie bags for the evening were handed out to all guests, & everyone retired to the lounge for more alcohol (a theme for the evening). Caribbean Roy was hitting the Baileys hard causing him to give Admiral Taz a lecture about his hometown (this was the 1st time Jedi had heard Roy talk about anything but spin bowling- he was SO drunk). The 1st casualty for the night was Party Dinosaur Tony Drant going home early much to the delight of Fingers Watson who had him in the sweep! The night moved onto poker with M&M Watson drinking JD's by the wine glass carnage was predicted. This proved to be true when M&M went on a glass-smashing spree that could only be beaten by a Greek wedding! The last stragglers left about 5:30am proving the night was a roaring success! Jedi and their Drinks

The Jedi didn't half get sloshed on Saturday 2nd December – but what on earth were they drinking, reports The Corinthian's anonymous drinking connoisseur

During the excitement of the movie premiere, a casual observer may have noted some rather unusual concoctions in the hands of the Jedi. The Corinthian can now give you a full run down of what was consumed at the premiere, and more importantly, what this means, according to our resident psychotherapist, Dr Ledley Mortimer.

Fingers Watson – Anything he could stick a lemon in.

What Ledley says: he is unsure of his sexuality; he likes to portray a manly image, but deep inside he has feelings, and the lemon helps him show off his feminine side. This was also reflected in his attire: Fingers wore jet black jump suit, a shiny black mask, and insisted on standing at the side of the road, whilst waving a large sabre at passing traffic.

Caribbean Roy – brought a bottle of baileys

What Ledley says: he is gay. The casual observer might wonder where he got a drink like Baileys from, what possessed him to show off this homosexual tendency in front of his fellow cricketers, and why it took him one hour forty minutes to walk from one end of the zone to the other.

M&M Watson – drank Baileys, lager, and 0.75 litres of Jack Daniels

What Ledley says: he's bi, and all consuming when in drink; he has problems dealing with crossroads, and instead invites procrastination by drinking everything in site. He also has motor neurone capability issues, having broken two glasses, and failing to find any sign of the broken glass whilst on his hands and knees, surrounded by said glass.

The Wookiee' - renamed OJ Wookiee, after a marathon six hour orange juice binge
What Ledley says: he couldn't find the wine. He is still recovering from his Polish drinking binge, where his lack of drinking experience found him ordering (and actually drinking) neat gin, vodka & lagers, and his own version of rose wine (he drank from a bottle of red and white wine at the same time.)

Coach Holliday – drank Beck's

What Ledley says: this means that the coach is still hiding his drink from everyone else, because no one else drank Beck's that night; indeed, a full bottle was found in the toilet cistern days later. This reveals a dark side to the Coach's nature, which manifests itself in both his addiction to alcohol, and his insistence on drinking alone. It would also suggest an ADHD personality: it was noted that he always took three gulps from the bottle, twizzled it round twice in his hand, stamped his foot and then ran up the stairs shouting 'I can't drink Stella no more Bubba, can't drink it no more', after each mouthful.

Tony Porsche – drank: Sol with lemon

What Ledley says: he believes all the marketing hyperbole regarding Sol tasting better with a lemon in it, which suggests that he would also waste money on designer clothes, buy food from M&S, and watch BBC2. He might also have a tendency to show off his establishment attitudes by sharing his passion for materialism with complete strangers, perhaps even new acquaintances. E.g. I'm Tony, I've got a Porsche.'

Quartermaster Cartman drank: cheap lager

What Ledley says: hankering for his days as a bachelor, Cartman realises that it makes no odds what he drinks, as long as he can't remember being married by the time he goes home.

Captain Taz drank: anything

What Ledley says: this type of consumption suggests GTA, an affliction whereby a batsman avoids good teams, by crying off with absurd excuses, like 'I'm going to revise for my A levels', or even 'I'm going to the prom tonight', which are both obviously ridiculous excuses for a grown man of nearly forty years of age. Who is he trying to kid?

Greedo drank: unknown

What Ledley says: Greedo tried to show off his independence, putting a flag in the ground that said 'I don't need the Jedi.' As you will see in The Corinthian's other main story, Greedo has a new job for Saturday nights. But, now X factor is finished, will the Jedi let him return to the bosom?

Lobot drank: cooking fat and some lawnmower petrol

What Ledley says: Lobot is finally overcoming his issues regarding being a human cyborg, and no longer drinks gin & tonics, which he felt made him look more human. Thus, I'm pleased to see him drinking liquids that were actually recommended for him in his manufacturer's instructions.

Uncle Daz drank: Stella

What ledley says: It was quite clear to all that Uncle Daz was suffering an identity crisis, having seen his scenes deleted from the 'Corinthian Jedi: the movie'. Like anyone who takes part in pornographic film making, he is now having to come to terms with the fact that an Ewok making love to a stuffed pig behind a large New Zealand flax in central Cleethorpes, no longer does it for a 21st century audience. They want real filth.

Darth Moore drank: everyone else's beer

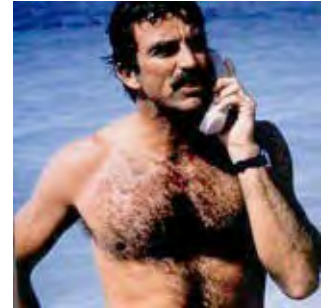

What Ledley says: Darth was quite obviously trying to balance out his peers' consumption of his alcohol, by drinking as much as he could of theirs. This suggests that he cannot actually afford the mortgage on his new house after all, and will probably have to return to the streets, from whence he came. He even tried to hide a 10 pack of bacon Frazzles, which was consumed in seconds by a very hungry M&M. Desperate stuff.

MagnumPI -Case3 Lost Movie Premiere Jedi

Hi Guys I'm back again, I was shocked to receive a call from my good friend Quartermaster Collins in December regarding cricket issues, but this was a serious matter- Lost Jedi Cricketers on the night of their 1st movie premiere.

Collins rings Magnum

Magnum answers!

Giles Greedo- This man was a dead cert. For the premiere so I was shocked to hear the dependable Giles failed to show. I spoke all my usual contacts & snouts including Johnny the shoeshine boy to no avail, so it was a great shock when I switch on the TV to find Giles Greedo sat there bold as brass slugging contestants off on X factor under his alter-ego of Simon Cowell.

M&M Watson, Caribbean Roy- Now the fact that Roy had not turned up by 9:00pm was concerning as this man lives, breathes, & sleeps cricket but I was able to find both him & Steve walking to the movie. I pull along side them in my Ferrari & asked why they were so late to which Roy replied "after recent accusations by my good friend Steve I decided not to leave him no matter how slow he walked, You've seen Top gun – never leave your wingman!"

Ivor Nano- As a lightweight drinker iVor has refused to go out with any Jedi cricketer in case they find out he only drinks Babysham! This has recently been discovered by Uncle Daz when he saw him in the Casablanca Club, when Uncle Daz asked why he drunk such a gay drink he replied "It makes your hair grow Wookie Moore told me, have you seen his fine mane of hair?"

Kelly Kelly- Well when I tried to find out where Kelly was I approach a good friend Rosemary who works as a telephone operator, she told me he got locked in a filing cabinet at work & has since been committed because he keeps claiming he's an International Crime fighter – one nutter mofo if you ask me!

iLobot- Why wasn't iLobot at the premiere after all he was the star of the movie? I asked a few of the other Jedi as to what they thought, Roy claimed he had artistic differences with Director Collins, and refused to promote the movie, Taz claimed he wanted paying for attending & the goodie bag wasn't good enough, but a tip off from ~~Quartermaster Collins~~ a reliable source said Darth Moore was seen leaving iLobots house 1 hour before the premiere started muttering "No Mofo is taking my glory, this is Darth Moores big night" iLobot still hasn't been seen to this day.
